When Congress met after President When Congress met after President Garfield's death it cast about for a fit man to deliver a culogy of Gen. Garfield, and its choice naturally fell to Mr. Blaine. It has been called one of the noblest performances of his life, and certainly he never spoke to so lofty and inspiring a theme.

"TWENTY YEARS IN CONGRESS." A Volume on Which Mr. Blaine Spent Con-

'siderable Time. When Mr. Blaine laid down the porttolio of the Secretary of State, some curi-city was felt as to what he would do. For over twenty-three years he had been in public life, and it was thought for a time at least, vacancy and idleness must over-take him. But Mr. Blaine welcomed this period of leisure as an opportunity for carrying out a plan long cherished in a mild way. Continuing to live in Washmild way. Continuing to live in Wash-ington, he began at once the composition of a work which he has called "Twenty Years in Congress." He devoted himself assiduously to writing, and was able after little more than two years' labor, to present to the public a thick volume 'as an earnest of his intention.

HIS TOUR ABROAD

And Ris Return to Enter the Cabinet of President Harrison

Fresident Harrison.

From 1884 to '88, during the time of President Cleveland's administration, Mr. Blaine devoted himself entirely to his family. He spent a year in an extended tour abroad, not returning to America until after the nomination of Mr. Harristan.

When Mr. Blaine returned to Washing ton in the fall of 1888, buoyant in mind after declining the use of his name as the candidate for President and ready to assume the premiership of the Cabinet of President Harrison, he had a happy fami-ly about him. The shadow upon his do-mestic felicity was the domestic troubla of his youngest son, who, since the days he wore knickerbockers and kilts was a source of much care and anxiety. Mr. Blaine took up the work of the State Department where he had hid it down in answer to the bullet of Guiteau, and mapped out a policy that was intended to make the Atministration a conspicuous success. His achievements in that direction need no mention here, being too fresh in the minds of all.

A Chain of Sorrows

In the brief period of less than four years that he was President Harrison's Secretary of State troubles came to him and whitened his head and enfeebied his frame. In that brief interval his eldest son, the pride of his heart, and his eldest daughter had died; his youngest son, whom he had perhaps spoiled by overindulgence, had dragged his name through the divorce court and public prints. Then, more crashing than public prints. Then, more crushing than all, the sudden death of his second son, all, the sudden death of his second son, the one of whom the father was very proud. In the opinion of Mr. Blaine's physicians no man, even with the frame of a giant and the will of a Napoleon, could resist disease while living in the shadow of such a chain of sorrows as this, and the efforts of the men of science were constantly handicapped by the hand of Providence.

A High Pressure Worker and an Irregular Enter.

A gentleman who was intimately acquainted with Mr. Blaine said that in his opinion Mr. Blaine broke himself down by intemperate work and irregular habits of eating. Mr. Blaine was a high pressure worker. Whonever he became deeply interested in a subject Mr. Blaine's ardent nature led him to work beyond his strength. He would shut himself up in his room, would not allow himself to be disturbed and would not eat. Sleep or rest until he had finished his task. He seemed to have adopted the motto which the great electrician Edison, who works in much the same way, gave who works in much the same way, gave to a youth, "Don't look at the clock."

Mr. Blaine was not ordinarily a large eater, but he was very irregular in his eating. Apparently he had no marked fondness for any kind of food. He did not care for fancy dishes and when traveling seldom consults of the contract of the contr ing seldom consulted the menu but told the waiter to bring him a good meal. He liked plain old-fashioned cooking. Whenever he did taste anything which greatly pleased him it was hard to get him to quit, and he would continue to eat despite his watchful wife's admonttons. In former years he was fond of horse backriding and took considerable exercise, but of late he showed much disinclination to bodily exertion.

During the winter before his illness he gave many small dinners and was a frequent diner-out.

During the summer he lived on his porch at Bar Harbor a great deal of the time and seemed to enjoy immensely hav-ing his grandchildren about him to talk

Mr. Blaine was very fond of Bar Harbor and occasionally when in a reminiscent mood would tell his visitor of the time when he might have bought the whole island for $500.

HIS WEALTH.

Valuable Real Estate, Coal Lands and Other Paying Enterprises.

Mr. Blaine died a rich man, even as wealth is reckoned in these days. He was worth close on to a million of dollars, if not more than that amount. It is probable that if some of his speculative investments could be sold out under advantageous circumstances that his wealth would include him in any list of millionaires. His holdings of coal lands are large and with the development of the country must greatly increase in value if kept intact for several years.

Mr. Blaine by reason of his wide popularity was associated with a number of men of wealth in various enterprises and his sagacity and business foresight kept him from wasting much money on brilliant but illusionary speemlative projects. He him from wasting much money on brin-ant but illusionary speculative projects. He was interested with Secretary Elkins years ago in a silver mine, out of which he made considerable money. At the time of his death he owned real

Mr. Elaine brought his Dupont Circle property, now almost in the heart of the fashionable Northwest when Stewart Castle, which is across the way, was thought to be out in the suburbs. The grounds and the house cost him approximated $85,000. Two or three years ago he sold a number of the lots in the rear of his house for $75,000. The house and the remaing ground is valued at $150,000. The house on Lafayette Square he at first rented for three years with an option of purchasing for $65,000. He took advantage of the option and bought the property after six months' residence. He also owned some valuable ground on P street, and a considerable area of ground of a less well-established but increasing value on what is known as but increasing value on what is known as Meridian Hill. This property is just be-yond the old city limits and overlooks the town. His holdings of West Virginia and

(Marie Nevins)

Pennsylvania coal lands are considerable. Mr. Blaine was one of the directors in the West Virginia Central Railroad Company, in which ex-Senator Davis, Secre-tary Elkins, ex-Secretary Bayard and others are interested. This road taps coal and timber lands which Mr. Blaine bought years ago very cheaply and which have become valuable through the railroad connections. His wealth includes bank stocks, but the approximate value cannot

Cleveland Has Nothing to Say

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—(Special)—A re-porter called at President-elect Clove land's office this afternoon and sent in a note asking if Mr. Cleveland had any statement to make on the death of Blaine. The messenger returned with the reply that Mr. Cleveland had noth-

THE PRESIDENT-ELECT'S CALLERS.

He Receives a Number of Political Visitors at His New York Office

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.-President-elect Cleveland spent the day at his office in this city and received many visitors. Among them were Mr. Filcher, the messenger who brought the electoral vote of California to Washington, and the Texas messenger, who left with the President a photograph of all the members of the electoral college of the Lone Star State.

Star State.

Mr. Wall, of Wisconsin, also called again to pay his respects before his departure to Washington on his way home. In the afternoon ex-Postmaster-General Don M. Dickinson spent some time with Mr. Cleveland by appointment and then went with him to Lakewood on the 4 o'clock train. How long he will remain is not known, but that he will discuss the Cabinet situation fulls with him. the Cabinet situation fully with his old chief is certain.

No direct news of the result of Mr.

Bayard's visit to Lakewood could be obtained, but it is the impression in political circles that the ex Secretary has taken the matter under advisement and will finally accept. It is well know that Mr. Bayard has not sought know that Mr. Bayard has not sought this or any other piace under the new administration, as is also the fact that he is naturally averse to a return to public life. It is also inferred that not much headway will be made with the making of the Cabinet until Mr. Bayard's decision has been reached.

making of the Cabinet until Mr. Bayard's decision has been reached.

A good deal of talk has been indulged in about Mr. Wall, of Wisconsin, entering the Cabinet, and the latter's occasional visits to this city have rather given color to this. But Mr. Wall has important business relations that make his presence here necessary from time to time. The talk about Mr. Wall's candidacy for a Cabinet place has not gone on by procurement of himself or his friends, and no steps have been taken looking to a formal presentation of his name.

His conspicuous success as a manager of his own State and his known busi-entation of his name.

His conspicuous success as a manager of his own State and his known business and exetutive abilities have prompted the discussion of his transfer to political duty in the President's Cabinet. It is understood now that he is not only not a candidate for such a place, but that he has expressed a desire to remain in private life, and has perfected arrangements that will enlarge his business interests.

LAREWOOD, N. J., Jan. 27.—It is now said that Mr. Cleveland is again insisting on Mr. Dickinson's accepting the State portfolio, which was offered him after Mr. Whitney had refused. Mr. Cleveland has sent for several Democratic leaders, and an important confercratic leaders, and an important conference will take place Monday or Tuesday, at which Mr. Bayard, Mr. Carlisle, Mr Whitney and Mr. Harrity will be present

MOBBED THE EX-PRIEST

His Lecture on Romanism Interrupted by Pistol Shots and Riot.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 27. - Prof. George P. Rudolph, formerly a Catholic priest at Cleveland, Ohio, attempted to lecture at the opera house this evening under the auspices of the American Protective Association. The speaker's subject was: "Why I left the Romish Church."

Church."
Soon after opening his discourse a mob broke in a rear door of the house and rushed on the stage and attacked the speaker. Rudolph was knocked down with a club, and on rising drew a revolver and fired two shots. This brought a regular fusillade from all parts of the house, which was crowded. A stampede at once ensued, and while screams rent the air a rush was made for the doors. Many of the ladies were bruised and thrown down in their efforts to escape.

The crowd was finally ejected from The crowd was finally ejected from the stage and Rudolph continued his lecture. The sheriff appointed a number of deputies, but they were unable to keep the crowd in the gallery quiet, and the meeting was adjourned. Between fifteen and twenty shots were exchanged, but no one was hit. A mob waited outside, but under strong guard Rudolph was placed in a close carriage and escorted to his boarding house.

Long before the hour for the exercises to begin had arrived the chapel of the church was filled to its utmost capacity. The ladies alone were almost enough in number to fill every seat, while hundreds of men occupied every available inch in the aisles.

reached the entrance were deprived of hearing.

Promptly at 8 o'clock Rev. Oliver C. Miller, the pastor, mounted the rostrum and in a few well-chosen words bade everybody welcome. After he took his seat the following programme was carried out:
